Delaware County Fair Code of Ethics & Conduct

Livestock projects afford our youth the opportunity to learn many valuable lessons including responsibility for other living creatures, decision making, budgeting and expense management and the value in maintaining accurate records. These are by no means all that our youth can expect to learn but they do establish a strong foundation and help build characteristics that will be beneficial to them for the rest of their lives

The livestock shows at our fair are the culmination of projects that in some instances our youth have spent multiple years working upon. These shows are highly visible and are a combination of seeing who has learned the most, is best at showmanship as well who raised the best looking and best trained animal in an ethical manner. Our youth learn that it is not all about winning, nor is it all about who can spend the most money and buy a "winner". Our youth display tremendous pride when they exhibit their animal.

Unfortunately, we all have seen or heard news of exhibitors at different events around the state and nation who have been caught abusing their animals to make weight requirements for the show or trying to win with the use of illegal drugs, or even giving banned substances to another exhibitor's animal. It is imperative that we help our youth to understand the concept of ethical conduct.

Dr. Jeff Goodwin, former Director of 4-H & Youth Development Programs at Colorado State University, teaches that ethics is defined as "the study of standards of conduct and moral judgment." When it comes to ethics we need to consider; practices or procedures done to the animal versus behavior by people. He poses 4 questions that help identify if practices are ethical or not.

- Does it violate any food laws? This would deal with safety of the meat produced.
- Is it a fraudulent misrepresentation of the animal?
- Does it compromise the welfare (or well-being) of the animal?
- Does it have anything to do with real world agriculture?

This brief list of questions makes it pretty easy to identify those practices or procedures that should not be done. The reason young people conduct projects is to learn by doing. Therefore, we should let them do the feeding, cleaning, clipping, grooming, and fitting of their animals. Sure, they need someone to teach them, but they don't learn if someone does it for them. And who should teach and provide that help? It's probably best if it's another 4-H or FFA member, parent, leader, teacher, brother or sister. It should definitely not be someone hired to do the job. Professional fitters have no place at a 4-H or FFA livestock show, except to be a part of the audience.

No one should do anything to an animal without the owner knowing about and agreeing with it. Parents who apply treatments to their child's animal to give it a competitive edge are putting their child at risk of being caught doing something illegal. Let's provide a good example of how to behave for our children.

Teaching ethics in the livestock program starts at home and at local clubs. Ethics deals with doing the right thing, not just what is within the bounds of the rules. It is not what you can get away with. Ethics is an attitude, and involves a conscience. Ethics is taught by example - a good example. Adults can only be reminded of what's right or wrong, because they have already learned this. Young people, on the other hand, are still learning. The lessons learned now will last a lifetime.

The Delaware County Fair promotes the six core ethical values of the CHARACTER COUNTS! Curriculum: trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, and citizenship.

Trustworthiness - Be honest • Don't deceive or cheat • Be reliable - do what you say you'll do • Have the courage to do the right thing • Build a good reputation • Be loyal - stand by your family, friends and country

Respect - Treat others with respect; follow the Golden Rule • Be tolerant of differences • Use good manners, not bad language • Be considerate of the feelings of others • Don't threaten, hit or hurt anyone • Deal peacefully with anger, insults and disagreements

Responsibility - Do what you are supposed to do • Persevere: keep on trying! • Always do your best • Use self-control • Be self-disciplined • Think before you act - consider the consequences • Be accountable for your choices

Fairness - Abide by the rules • Be open-minded; listen to others • Don't take advantage of others • Don't blame others carelessly

Caring - Be kind • Be compassionate • Express gratitude • Forgive others • Help people in need

Citizenship - Do your share to make our community better • Cooperate • Get involved in community affairs • Be a good neighbor • Obey laws and rules • Respect authority • Protect the environment

All youth leaders working with junior exhibitors are under an affirmative responsibility to do more than avoid improper conduct or questionable acts. Their moral values must be so certain and positive that those younger and more pliable will be influenced by their fine example.

Owners, exhibitors, fitters, trainers and absolutely responsible persons who violate the code of ethics will forfeit premiums, awards and auction proceeds and shall be prohibited from future exhibition in accordance with the rules adopted by the respective fairs and livestock shows. Exhibitors who violate this code of ethics demean the integrity of all livestock exhibitors and should be prohibited from competition at all livestock shows.

Remember that as leaders we must always display the highest levels of personal integrity, lead by example, and communicate efficiently.
